

LAURA STANTON

Laura is an associate attorney at Nochumson P.C., where she focuses her practice on real estate and business litigation. She brings strategic problem-solving skills and a calm presence to disputes involving property rights and commercial relationships. Clients rely on her ability to break down complicated issues, communicate clearly, and craft arguments that are both precise and persuasive.

Laura graduated cum laude from Boston University with a B.A. in International Relations as a Kilachand Honors College scholar. Before entering the legal field, she supported BU's international student and scholar population in roles that required navigating complex immigration regulations, advising students, and managing highvolume administrative processes— experience that strengthened her ability to adapt quickly to evolving regulations and support individuals from diverse backgrounds.

Laura has explored a wide range of legal disciplines, giving her a broad, wellrounded perspective on how different areas of law intersect and shape client outcomes. At Temple University's Beasley School of Law, she represented clients in employment matters and served as a Staff Editor and Research Editor for the Temple International & Comparative Law Journal. She also completed legal practicums focused on artificial intelligence, risk assessment, and data privacy.

Before joining Nochumson, Laura worked as a litigation associate at Kent/McBride in Philadelphia, where she gained substantial experience in insurance defense. She handled matters involving premises liability, motor vehicle accidents, and general negligence claims, developing strong skills in motion drafting, discovery, and summarizing large volumes of information.

She is licensed to practice law in Pennsylvania, New Jersey, and the United States District Court for the Eastern District of Pennsylvania.
