

John "Alex" Hamilton

Alex focuses his practice on many aspects of commercial litigation and real estate, as well as legal issues primarily affecting small- to medium-sized businesses and entrepreneurs in the Philadelphia region. He has comprehensive experience drafting legal documents, assisting with the discovery process, and performing legal research.

Starting his career as a paralegal at Pepper Hamilton, Alex acquired extensive experience on FCPA and Anti-Kickback Statute matters while working with top multinational pharmaceutical companies. There, he also assisted with all stages of the expert witness development process in pharmaceutical products liability defense litigation, as well as managed individual cases in antidepressant birth defects litigation.

During law school, Alex interned at Temple University Beasley School of Law and collected significant experience in the business formation area, including but not limited to potential risk exposure, business entities, contracts, employment agreements, user agreements, and website terms and conditions.

Prior to joining the firm, Alex served as a clerk at Saltz, Mongeluzzi & Bendesky, P.C. where he managed a high-volume portfolio of pre-suit and active cases. He was also responsible for investigating and responding to pleadings, reviewing discovery documents, and assisting attorneys in various areas of law.

Alex is a member of Temple American Inn of Court and is admitted to practice in the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania.

Alex holds a B.A. degree in Honors Arts & Letters, Spanish, Political Science from Texas Tech University, M.A. degree in International Relations and African Studies from Boston University, and a J.D. degree from Temple University Beasley School of Law.
